Description:

A German Kabinett wine (pronounced: Kah-bee-net) is the first and lightest of the ripeness levels in what is known as the QMP (Qualitätswein mit Prädikat) scale of grape sugar content. Kabinett denotes a less sweeter style of wine than its close neighbors, Spatlese and Auslese (also offered within the Saint Josef family of labels).

With a touch more acidity in this superb vintage, the 2008 Kabinett is a fragrant, medium-bodied gem evoking notes of orange peel and lemon curd. The simplest way to describe the enjoyment of this wine is to ask yourself a question: Do you like the full, lush flavors of a quality German wine, but favor a bit less sweetness and more delicacy? If so, a Kabinett wine classification is right for you. German wine laws categorize the ripeness measured in the natural grape sugar for Kabinett at 17% - 21% by weight. The higher the ripeness (more extracted sugar) the higher in the pyramid it is classified.

The term Kabinett, originally written as "cabinet" on wine labels signified a better wine that has been set aside by the producer for later sale, literally in a cabinet, and corresponds to the use of the term reserve in other countries.

Sourcing our fruit from the Rheinhessen allowed careful grape selection that produced well balanced features. The Rheinhessen has varied soils and favorable climate conditions offering a long growing season. Rheinhessen wines are often characterized as fragrant, elegant and full of great depth.
